

Cancer as a Fungus

Recently I visited a dear friend who has been dealing with breast cancer for over ten years. After a long attempt to avoid surgery and medication, she was forced to have a double mastectomy. She has chosen to avoid the chemo treatments. This takes a lot of courage given that the standard thing to do would have her use these forms of treatment. Yet over the past 10 years this woman has watched while her oncologist and several people she knew chose conventional medicine and died of similar cancers in just a few years.

There is so much controversy around how to treat cancer and it is important to admit that, as much as there are people with strong opinions, there are many possible ways to deal with cancer. My father dealt with pancreatic cancer by using a combination of Chemo and natural medicine. He lasted for 9 months. In today's reality everyone knows someone who has died of cancer: For most of us – someone dear to us. Statistics show that one out of every three persons will get some kind of cancer. These statistics are alarming to say the least.

President Nixon declared a war on cancer in 1970. Every president since then has confirmed this war. Yet after millions and billions of dollars spent on finding a cure, things do not look much better. Sounds like a holographic parallel to Iraq. J

In researching, there are numerous claims that cancer can be cured. There are people who believe that we need to protect ourselves from chemicals in our air, water and food. Some people and even scientist claim that the treatments for cancer – radiation and chemo – cause cancer. Others say it is caused by electromagnetic fields. Some claim that eating organic vegetarian diets prevents cancer. Others say that it is based on our moods and that happy people are better off than sad, angry and depressed people. The other day, our washer was broken and the repairman told me about a person north of Asheville that claimed to be treating breast cancer with 100% success by getting rid of fungus in the mouth. Who knows?

It is important to remember that there are many false claims, false accusations and false cures out there. It is also good for our spiritual and personal growth to be open to what infinite possibilities may exist in the world. In researching there where three interesting videos on YouTube I found about cures for cancer. There were many more. I found one about dealing with chemo and radiation. I could not find an article or a video that spoke about how chemo and radiation cures cancer. If you can please let me know.

I recently heard of a naturopath I have known to be reputable in the past claiming he had the cure for cancer. Billy Best claims he cured himself from cancer with natural medicine and Daniel Hause is asking the courts to allow him the right to choose his own treatment. I found a few claims for cancer cures in my research.

DCA is a compound being sold in Canada and worldwide yet not in the US. It kills cancer cells in a test tube and leaves the healthy cells alone. Dr. Michelakis from Alberta warns that the patient should be very careful if taking other drugs since the side affects of combining DCA are risky. Although Glenn Beck is a bit on the right for me usually he reports on DCA on this video. <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dR38y2I5g5E&NR=1>

The claim is made that a one-minute cure for cancer and other diseases exist. The u-tube video captured my attention yet did not provide me with answers. In order to get specific answers you must buy their book. Although not my style and a definite red flag, given my openness to research and the fact that I have friends dealing with stage 4 cancers, my curiosity had me order the book. I will definitely update this article as soon as I get the book to review. If you want watch the video and judge for yourself. <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=y3bAl9ISHg0&feature=related>

A few weeks ago the appliance repairperson that came to my house mentioned a doctor near Asheville that was curing breast cancer by dealing with it as a fungus. I found “Cancer is a fungus” by Dr. Simoncini. <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HQuODiMIUsc> . I was left with a simple question – Is the evidence of white imply a fungus that causes cancer? In Chinese medicine a white coating on the tongue is excess damp in the body. The claim for a cancer cure appears to give optimism yet is it valid?

The most useful information I found was “Super Cure for Cancer, a great easy guide to overcome cancer and its tough treatment”. This video documents and shows how lifestyle and diet can significantly improve survival and reduce symptoms. I recommend you watch this.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-QS1Lgqdp3E>

Today, I was part of a radio interview with Dr. Stewart Lonky on the Frankie Boyer Show. His book Invisible Killers explains how toxins are affecting our health. He spoke about how his Medical Doctor associates are starting to see alarming rates of cancer and other diseases that are being correlated with environmental factors.

Maybe it's hype – maybe it's miracles in existence that are being marketed away from us by big money. Have your own perspective. Make your own conclusions. Take ownership of your free will.

For me, I am an idealistic optimist and believer in people. I have been accused of being naive to think that everyone has good intentions. Yet in my life I have personally known and socialized with MD's, Acupuncturists, Naturopaths, Oncologists, Surgeons, Energy Healers and Pharmacists that all cared about their patients and wanted what was best for them. They all believed in what they were doing. This is not a conversation about right or wrong or accusing anyone of trying to hurt someone. That type of conflict and attitude will just keep us all sick – physically and emotionally. What we need is common ground and I believe that the caring is it.

The issues as I see them are “CHOICE” and “FREEDOM”. To heal, we must have free choice and access to information that gives us that choice. As much as conspiracy theorist say choices are being taken away, when I research, I find more and more information available to help me make choices. The Internet gives each of us an endless access to information we could not dream of even 5 years ago. There are endless books available in bookstores. I find immense caring from all medical practitioners including the herbalist I know and the doctor who gave my father chemo. They all care.

Is there a cure for cancer? I assume that somewhere in time the answer is yes. Maybe it's here already. If it is in our destiny to heal, then for me it's diet, lifestyle, belief, environment and a lack of fear. My suggestion is that while you wait and look for cures the thing to do is to:

- ^ Be realistic
- ^ Be an idealist
- ^ Be open and flexible
- ^ Be responsible
- ^ Listen to your gut
- ^ Listen to people who are educated and credentialed
- ^ Take time to question. If someone gets defensive at your questions – I would assume that as a red flag.

When it comes to cures, the biggest thing that stands out for me is spiritual teachings around who we are and what works. Years ago I had two separate teachings that helped me heal and cope in my life. In 1981 Bo In Lee, from the Mahayana Yoga Center near Boston, explained to me that the one thing healthy people he knew had in common was laughter. Another special teacher explained to me that the root of all healing comes from the context and awareness that we are spiritual beings having a physical experience – - - and what an experience it is.